Senator Thomas to Meet Auto Owners.

With a view of dissussing the Newcomb bill now pending in the Kentucky
Legisslature, Senator Claude M.
Thomas will meet the automobile owners of this county at the court house Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and earnestly request all owners, users and automobile enthusizests to be in attendance.

To these interested in the Newcomb bill, the provisions of which are calculated to work a hardship to the owners of automobiles and the auto interests, the meeting will no doubt prove very interesting.

Considerale pressure has been brought to bear upon Senator Thomas to oppose the passage of this measure. Petitions containing the signatures of all the automobile owners in this county have been forwarded to hm, together with those of a number of the most prominent citizens of the county, and the resolutions adopted by the Bourbon Motor Club at the meeting held in this city Monday urging him to

Aside from the action taken by the Bourbon and Fayette Motor Clubs, a number of owners in Maysville, Winchester and Nicholasville held meetings, condemned the drastic provisions of the measure and appealed to their Senators and Representatives in the Legislatrue to oppose the passage of

All automobile owners are requested to assemble at 1:30 p. m. before the meeting to give in their names for membership in the club and to get posted on the bad clauses in the nefarious Newcomb Automobile Bill and to oppose the bill in toto.

Alleg ed Murderer Captured.

William Kild a negro wanted at Cynthiana on a charge of murder was arrested by Deputy Sheriff J. O. Marshall Tuesday morning at the railroad camp in the South yards of the Louisville & Nashville railroad and lodged in jail. The arrest of Kidd was made at the instance of the Harrison authorities, and the local officers have been on the lockout for the alleged murderer for several months. Deputy Sheriff Marshall received information that Kidd was in the railroad camp and placed him under arrest. The negro is alleged to have killed a negro companion at a railroad camp near Garnett Station on the L. & N. last August and has since been at large. His victim was an Alabama negro. Deputy Sheriff Marshall went to Cynthiana Tuesday afternoon where he turned his prisoner over to the Harrison authorities.

May Build in the Early Spring.

That the S. H. Kress Co., of New York, contemplate the erection of a modern business house upon the site of the old Baptist church at the corner of Main and Sitxh streets, is evidenced by the information given out by their local agent, Mr. Lee T. Beall.

According to Mr. Beall, when the company purchased the property they had under construction fifteen buildings in various cities throughout the United States and the construction of the bisiness house in this city, would follow when they are completed.

It is expected the erection of the building in this city will begin sumetime in the early spring. At present the S. H. Kress Co., is opreating over one hundred and thirty stores throughout the United States. The lot upon which the proposed building will be located faces 66 feet 8 inches on Main street and runs back an equal depth. The streuture will be three stories in height, the lower floor to be used as a storeroom by the company, which will conduct a five and ten cent store, and the remainder of the building will be leased as office rooms.

Faced Coal Famine.

Delayed shipments of coal the early part of the week almost caused a coal famine in this community, and up to this date the steady drain occasioned by the cold weather has not been fully relieved. For several days many of the yards only had a limited supply which was carefully conserve.

Goes East.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Simon, of the Simon Department Store, left yesterday for the East where they go to purchase the early spring showing of fine millinery, suits, dress goods, etc., for their beautiful store. Mr. Simon stated that it was his intention to buy one of the largest stocks for early spring and summer he has ever purchased. The new goods will begin to arrive in about two weeks. To make room for this new stock Mr. Simon announces in his regular advertisement a "Cleaning Up Sale" of odds and ends, quentities of remnant of dress goods and wash goods, ginghams, table linens, embroidery, laces, ribbons, etc. The remnants must be cleared out and they are going to be sold at real rem nant prices. Also large stock of readyto-wear suits and cloaks also go in this sale. Slightly soiled waists and underwear at bargain prices, also some handsome lace curtains in this lot. The shoe department is to be discontinued and every rair must go.

Mr. Simon has left orders behind to his manager and clerks to clean up this stock and to do it at once. If the ladies of Paris desire real bargains they should take advantage of this big clean up sale.

Some of the spring suits will begin to arrive the first of the week. Don't place your order until you have visited this store.

Don't overlook the millinery department this spring for the display no doub! will eclipse all former efforts.

-Acting upon the suggestion of Col. W. Showalter, of Scott county, one of the most prominent and influential breeders and thoroughbred owners in the South, the breeders, owners and trainers of thoroughbreds in Kentucky are preparing a petition, to be pre-sented at an early date, to the officials of the racing associations at Juarez and Charleston, where racing is now in progress, urging that the number of races for two-year-olds at those tracks be increased to the extent of one or more each racing day.

-Arrangements are being made at Carlisle for the annual corn show of the Boys' Corn Club and Rural School Fair, of Nicholas county, to be held March 2. There will be a large gathering of educators there on that occasion and someof the leading men of the State will deliver addresses. Samples of the corn raised last season by the boys will be exhibited and prizes awarded. The corn club for 1912 will be organized and seed distributed. A boys' fruit growing contest will be inaugurated and a poultry or flower growing contest for the girls of the

An equal division of all the money in the United States would result in each man, woman and child possessing $34.61. That amount is the per capita circulation, according to the calculation of the Treasury Department, which estimates that the population of the country has grown from 91,972,266, as determined by the census of 1910, to 94,958,000 on February 1, 1912.

The stock of money in America is fast climbing up into the billions. On February 1 there was $3,621,572,121 in the United States. Of this $3,388,302,-481 represented the assets of the government and $3,286,239,640 was in circulation. Thirty-three years ago the entire amount in circulation in this country was $916,266,721.

Regular Habits.

It is a good plan to have a regular time for reading. One accomplishes so much more in this way, and besides establishes a kind of intellectual habit that is a good thing in itself. In an hour, or even half an our given regularly each day to reading, a great deal may be accomplished. Do not confine yourself to serious books. Alternate light with heavy reading, and do not attempt heavy reading when you are tired. Do not read merely to be amused. Treat your books as friend. Do not follow blindly the teachings of any book.

Feminine Curiosity.

Little Eleanor's pretty cousin wore a new engagement ring, and the budding woman regarded the ring and the giver alike with reverent eyes. One night when the happy man has been invited to Eleanor's home for dinner. Eleanor, unconsciously gushing, burst forth with: "Oh, Mr. Blank, do please tell me. In all the love stories I've read the men propose so sudden. When it's coming on, does it-does it feel anything like a sneeze?"

"Preserving" the Baby.

Young James had seen some fish and puzzled by the explanation, elicited by a long and steady fire of questions, that the salting process was to make the fish "keep." A little later he attended the baptism of an infant friend and was still puzzled. But at last a light broke in upon him, and in a shrill tone that could be heard all over the sacred edifice he exclaimed: "Oh, now I know all about it, mother. The water is to make the baby keep!"

HAPTER I.—The story opens at onte Carlo with Col. Terence O'Rourke his hotel. O'Rourke, a military free and something of a gambler, is essing for appearance in the restaurant ow when the sound of a girlish voice ging attracts his attention. Leaning on the balcony he sees a beautiful who suddenly disappears. He rushes the corridor to see a neatly gowned menter the elevator and pass from

HAPTER II.—O'Rourke's mind is ed with thoughts of the girl, and when goes to the gaming table he allows his arkable winnings to accumulate in-erently. He notices two men watch-him. One is the Hon. Bertie Glynn, ile his companion is Viscount Des bes, a noted duelist. When O'Rourke aves the table the viscount tells him he presents the French government and at he has been directed to O'Rourke as man who would undertake a secret

CHAPTER III .- At his room O'Rourke. who had agreed to undertake the mission, awaits the viscount. O'Rourke finds a mysterious letter in his apartment. The viscount arrives, hands a sealed package to O'Rourke, who is not to open it until on the ocean. He says the French government will pay O'Rourke 25,000 francs for his services. A pair of dainty slipr his services. A pair of dainty slip-rs are seen protruding from under a corway curtain and the viscount charges Rourke with having a spy secreted

CHAPTER IV.—When the Irishman goes to his room he finds there the owner of the mysterious feet. It is his wife, Beatrix, from whom he had run away a Beatrix, from whom he had run away a year previous. They are reconciled, and opening the letter he had received. he finds that a law firm in Rangoon, India, offers him 100,000 pounds for an Indian jewel known as the Pool of Flame and left to him by a dying friend. O'Rourke tells his wife that it is in the keeping of a friend named Chambret in Algeria.

CHAPTER V.—O'Rourke is forced to fight a duel with the viscount. The brag-gart nobleman is worsted in the combat CHAPTER VI.—The loyal wife bids O'Rourke farewell and he promises to soon return with the reward offered for the Pool of Flame. He discovers both Glynn and the viscount on board the ship which takes him to Algeria.

CHAPTER VII.—Chambret has left Algeria and O'Rourke has to gain a military detachment going across the desert to reach his friend. As he finds the latter there is an attack by bandits and Chambret is shot.

CHAPTER VIII.—Chambret dies telling O'Rourke that he has left the Pool of Flame with the governor general of Algeria. He gives the colonel a signet ring at the sight of which he says the official will deliver over the jewel.

CHAPTER IX .- O'Rourke is attacked by Glynn and the viscount who ransack his luggage, but he worsts them in the escapes to land. CHAPTER XVI.-With the aid of one Danny and his sweetheart, O'Rourke re-covers the Pool of Flame.

CHAPTER XVIII .- On board ship once more a mysterious lady appears who puzzles and interests the Irishman.

CHAPTER XX .- Mrs. Prynne claims route for India on a mission

CHAPTER XXI.-The ship captain is offered money to increase the speed of the vessel toward its destination.

"Looks as if he hadn't a friend in the world," said the man audibly. "Looks as if a letter from home with cash draft 'ud about fill his little bill." He grunted in pleased appreciation of his own subtle wit. A short man he was, stout, very much at home in grimy pajamas and nothing else, with eyes small, blue, informed with twinking humor and set in a florid countenance bristling with a three days' growth of grayish beard.

He swung the glasses again upon O'Rourke, and, "Hell!" he exclaimed, sitting up with stimulated interest. "Well, by jinks!" said the stout man. "Who'd a-thunk it?"

He got up with evident haste and waddled forward to the bridge, where he came upon what he evidently needed in his business: a huge and battered megaphone. Applying this to his lips and filling his lungs he bellowed with a right good will, and his hail, not unlike the roaring of an amiable bull, awoke Aden's echoes: "O-o-Rourke!"

"Good morning," murmured the Irshman, lifting his head to stare about him with incredulous curiosity. "Who's that barking at me?"

The pajama'd person continuing to shout at the top of his roice, by dint of earnest staring the Irishman eventually located the source of the uproar. "Now who the divvle might ye be?" he wondered. "Ananias, me friend"-to the boatman-"row to the steamer yonder where the noise comes from." Whereupon the stout man. seeing the boat after its course, put'aside the megaphone. And again peace brooded over Aden.

On nearer approach to the tramp, O'Rourke's smile broadened to a pleased grin, and airily he waved a hand to the man with the voice.

"Jimmy Quick!" he observed with unfeigned delight. "Faith, I begin to believe that me luck holds, after all!"

From the bottom step of the tramp's ladder he tossed a coin to the boatman, then mounted to the deck. Incontinently the stout man fell heavily upon his neck with symptoms of extreme joy. A lull succeeding his first transports, he wiped his eyes, beamed upon his guest and suggested insinuatingly: "Drink?"

"Brevity's ever the soul of your wit, captain," said O'Rourke. "I will." And he meekly followed Quick's bare morning we'll be far enough out for heels forward to the officer's quarters you to take hold without spraining the beneath the bridge.

Having set him in a chair, Quick, still a-gurgle, wandered off, unearthed a bottle, beamed upon his visitor, asked a dozen questions in as many breaths and, without waiting for an answer, waddled off again to return with a brace of dripping soda-water bottles. "Schweppe's," he said, patting their rotund forms tenderly; "and the last in our lockers-all in your honor, colonel."

"So?" commented O'Rourke. "Hard up, is it? 'Tis not the O'Rourke who would be wishing ye ill, captain, dear, but, faith, meself's not sorry to hear shrill and there followed the sound of that word this day. I'm thinking me luck is sound, after all."

Quick had again vanished. Presently O'Rourke heard his mighty voice The sounds of shuffling, of blows, booming down an engine-room ventilator. "Dravos! Dravos, you loafer! Come up and see a strange sight!"

He came back, still vibrant with an elephantine sort of joy. "O'Rourke," he panted, mopping a damp brow with the sleeve of his jacket, "you're a good sight for sore eyes. Never did we meet up with you yet but there came a run of luck."

"'Tis good hearing," said O'Rourke, smiling.

A slight little man slipped a bald head, relieved by ragged patches of gray hair about the temples, apologetically into the cabin door.

"The top of the day to ye, Dravos!" said O'Rourke loudly, for little Dravos was partially deaf. "And how are the and slinking forward to their quarters. engines?"

The engineer carefully hitched up his trousers and regarded the wanderer with temperate geniality.

"To-night," said Dravos. "If," stipulated Quick, "I can pick up a crew in Aden.'

'Tis settled then." "We'll need a bit of money in advance."

"Ye shall have it, within reason." Dravos rose and sidled towards the door, a faraway look in his pale eyes. "You strike the bargain, Quick," he said; "I'll have a look around the engine-room." "Right-O, Bobby. . . Yourself alone, I s'pose, O'Rourke?" "And three others. Danny-"

"Yes, yes." "And two ladies; an Englishwoman and her maid."

CHAPTER XXII.

By nine o'clock the Ranee lay with steam up, ready to weigh anchor. It is no praise to Dravos to state that his engines were in admirable condition. Such was their invariable state. For an assistant he impressed into service none other than Danny Mahone, to Danny's intense dismay.

O'Rourke took upon himself the duties of first officer under Captain Quick. The Irishman cared little for the sea, knew less of a first officer's duties; but it was patent that Quick could not stand every watch, and C'Rourke was not to be daunted by any such slight matter as nautical inexperience.

In the knowledge that they were safely off at last there was poignant relief to the wanderer, as he stood by Quick's side, on the bridge, with midnight imminent and the ship still and peaceful. "I'll stand the night watches," the captain announced. "By art of seamanship. G'dnight."

"Thank ye," said O'Rourke. In fact, he had long been sensible that he was very drowsy; the night wind in his face had something to do with that. "Good night," he returned, and went down the ladder to the deck.

At its foot he paused, turning curiously; it seemed that surely there must be some serious trouble afoot in the crew. The Irishman could see in the glimmer of the forecastle lantern a confused blur of naked, shining, brown bodies and limbs, apparently inextricably locked. A scream rang a heavy fall.

Overhead, on the bridge, Quick was roaring himself hoarse, without effect. harsh breathing, stifled cries, continued. A knot of the contestants swept, whirling, aft, toward the superstructure. Something shot singing through the air; the wind of it fanned O'Rourke's cheek.

With an unconscious, surprised oath, O'Rourke stepped aside, his hand going toward his revolver. The missile struck a stanchion, glanced and fell overlooking the struggling rabble on the deck below. But they seemed intent only on their private differences, and Quick's roars were bringing them to their senses. Gradually the tumult subsided, the contestants separating

"It may have been chance," O'Rourke conceded a bit doubtfully. He swung about and moved aft slowly, examining the deck intently. In a moment or two he stopped and picked up a long, thin-bladed knife, doubleedged and keen as a razor. The point was broken, having doubtless been snapped off at the moment of contact with the deck-house. O'Rourke turned it over soberly.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The day came out of the East with a windy swagger; as Quick had fore told, a series of thunderstorms swept the sea before dawn, so that it, like the sky, seemed newly washed, clean and brilliant.

O'Rourke relieved Quick at four bells of the morning watch and kept the deck for the remainder of the day, his meals being brought to him on the bridge. His duties were simple enough, requiring tittle more than a He shook hands, sat down on the edge display of the habit of authority which sat so well on his broad shour who fears he intrudes, and glanced ders. It was no great trick to keep their work peaceably enough and showed no signs of desiring to renew their disputations. But from his was nothing difficult to a man of avwater lay between them and Bombay, so long as a direct course was shaped

He began to be-Quick slapped a huge thigh delight- lieve with Quick that the affair of the edly. "I knew it-could have sworn winged knife was merely a hapchance accident, quite unpremeditated.

Below decks, Dravos and Danny were standing watch-and-watch, with clockwork regularity, where the forexplained the Irishman. "Can ye make mer's beloved engines were justifying his confidence and pride in them and clicking off their twenty knots without a hitch.

Now Danny happened to have "off" the first afternoon watch. O'Rourke from the bridge saw him come up the engine-room companion ladder, dive into the messroom for his dinner, and later emerge, picking his teeth and grinning self-complacency until his master could have kicked him, had such a course been politic before the crew, or even consistent with the dignity of his office.

"A word to say to ye, sor, if I may make so bold."

O'Rourke glanced at the helmsman, and having long since made up his mind that the man was competent, left him in possession of the bridge for a space, and joined Danny below.

"What is it?" Danny lowered his voice to a hoarse whisper. "Kape yer eye on thot black

"Ah," commented O'Rourke. "Thank you, Danny."

He continued to watch the serang until the latter, as if influenced by the fixity of the Irishman's regard, turned and stared directly into O'Rourke's eyes. For a full minute he gave him look for look, dark eyes steadfast and unyielding above his fine aquiline nose, then calmly turned his back, resuming his contemplation of the turbulent horizon.

An instant later Quick came up to relieve O'Rourke, and, eight bells sounding, Danny dived below to take Dravos' place. O'Rourke, unpleasantly impressed by the incident, still forbore to mention it to either of the ship's owners; he retired to think it over, and spent a long hour consuming an indifferent cigar and studying the cracks in the bulkhead between his room and the cabin.

* Without profit, however. Lacking more substantial proof than Danny's suspicions, he could arrive at no definite conclusion.

The night passed without incident; the second day dawned the counterpart of its predecessor, and wore away quietly enough.

It fell to O'Rourke to stand the first dog-watch, from four to six in the evening. Shortly after he ascended clattering into the scuppers. Revolver the bridge, it was his happiness to be in hand, he went forward to the rail joined by Mrs. Prynne, who improved the moment to express her gratification with the propitious tide in her affairs. The King's courier was pleased to declare herself very well pleased indeed, though she admitted, under jocular pressure, that she considered she was roughing it. Captain Quick's quarters were by no means palatial, and the bill of fare, while substantially composed, lacked something of variety; but that was all a part of the great and fascinating game she played -the game of secret service to His Majesty, Edward VII.

Not that alone, but she was comforted by the assurance that her voyage would soon be over, her mission discharged, her responsibility a thing "Faith, I don't like to think it was of the past. She would be glad to see
